Finnish Lapland is one of the last great wildernesses of Europe. Huge expanses of silent coniferous forests, impenetrable bogs and vast open fells comprise the awe-inspiring landscape of Lapland. It is a paradise for hikers and adventurers who wish to experience nature in the raw. Many sought-after bird species enliven the forests, fells and peatlands, making this a paradise for European birdwatchers. The collection of rare wildflowers, dragonflies and butterflies and the presence of large predators like Wolf and Brown Bear makes Finnish Lapland a must-see destination for nature lovers.

This nature guide is part of the Crossbill Guides series for nature enthusiasts. The Crossbill Guides combine interesting and insightful accounts with up-to-date and practical tourist information and tips on observing wildlife. Detailed descriptions of drive and hiking trails are conveniently linked to information on everything you want to know about the wheres, whats, and whys of the splendid nature of Finnish Lapland.
